FOUR BITE DUST IN HERRIN GANG WAR

FORTRESS AT SHADY NEST BLOWN UP AND DESTROYED

Factions Near Herrin, Illinois, Still Warring on Each Other — Four Members of the Birger Gang Blown up a Bomb — Shelton Brothers Wreck Vengeance Against Their Competitors in Bootlegger War.

Four persons met death late Saturday night in the latest demonstration of southern Illinois gang warfare when Shady Rest, armed road house and Camp of Charles Birger, leader of one of the factions, was dynamited and burned. The deaths brought to 13 the total of those who have been killed within the last five months.

Shady Rest, 12 miles from Marion, Illinois, on a state highway leading to Harrisburg, Saline county seat, and just within Williamson county, had been maintained by Birger as a base of operations against the Shelton brothers gang. The gangs are engaged in a feud for supremacy in the coal belt liquor traffic. Machine guns, high powered rifles and revolvers were stacked in the place, which was headquarters for an armored truck the gang used for some time, but which lately had been dismantled.

Efforts to identify the bodies have been unsuccessful. They were burned beyond recognition, but it is believed that two are those of Steve George, caretaker and his wife. Sheriff Oren Coleman and deputies are attempting a check of known members of the gang to ascertain if any are missing. Birger, who lived in Harrisburg, is missing and has not been seen there for several days. Lory Price, a state highway partolman, said that he saw Art Newman, a Birger lieutenant, his wife and Mrs. Birger leaving Harrisburg in an automobile Saturday. They told him, he said, that they would not return until after the trial at Springfield, Illinois, the last of this month, of Carl, Earl and Bernard Shelton, who are charged with mail robbery.

Newman and his wife had lived at the roadhouse until Friday. Coleman is working on a theory that three of the bodies are those of members of the Birger gang and that the fourth is that of one of the attacking gangsters. There are evidences of a struggle 30 feet in front of the road house, with marks indicating that a heavy object had been dragged toward the burned structure.

Ray Rone and Harvey Dungey, said to be members of the Birger gang, who are held in jail on auto theft charges, could not give no assistance in attempts at identification.

The destruction of the road house and camp was reported to Oren Coleman, sheriff of Williamson county at Marion, Illinois, Saturday by an automobilist. Coleman and George Bell, coroner, with a party of deputies discovered the bodies.

Farmers living in the vicinity of the roadhouse reported that they had heard explosions about midnight in the direction of the camp, and shortly afterward saw flames there. None of them dared to investigate for fear they would encounter those who had burned the place.

Shady Rest consisted of a one story log cabin with basement, a powerhouse and a barbecue stand. The cabin was burned to the ground, the powerhouse had been blown up and the barbecue stand riddled with bullets.

The proprietor of a filling station at Crab Orchard, seven miles east of Marion, told Sheriff Coleman that two automobiles passed his filling station before midnight going east in the direction of the roadhouse and that the same automobiles returned an hour later, going in the opposite direction at high speed. He said that he did not note the license number of either automobile, nor did he recognize any of the occupants.

The roadhouse was the object of an airplane bombing attack last fall a few hours after the Sheltons were arrested by federal agents on the mail robbery charge, but the bombs missed fire. Birger blamed the Shelton gang with the attack.

The gang leader repeatedly has said that he will kill Shelton on sight, and recently offered a reward for information as to his whereabouts. Newman has said that Carl Shelton was one of several men who attacked him and his wife with machine guns while driving near Harrisburg early last fall.

Carl Shelton is out on $60,000 bond awaiting trial on the mail robbery charge, but Earl and Bernard are held in jail. One is at Peoria and the other at Bloomington, Illinois, following their entering of not guilty pleas in federal court at Springfield last week. Birger was named as an accessory before the fact in the murder of Mayor Adams, after a corner's jury had heard testimony that the gang leader had made threats against Adams.

The warrant for Birger's arrest was delivered to Sheriff Lige Turner of Saline county, but it is uncertain whether it was served, for Birger has not filed bond and was not taken to the Franklin county seat at Benton for arraignment. Turner refused to tell what he had done with the warrant.

MRS. GILDERSLEEVE DEAD.

Mrs. Rosabelle Gildersleeve, widow of the late Leland H. Gildersleeve, died at the home of her son, William Gildersleeve, 800 Hamlet street, Columbus, early Saturday morning, at the age of 62 years. She had been in failing health two years, as the result of a stroke of paralysis. Mrs. Gildersleeve leaves in addition to her son, William, three other sons, Charles, of Circleville; Fred and Eugene Gildersleeve of Columbus; three daughters Mrs. Harry Calbert of Mt. Sterling and Misses May and Lelia Gildersleeve a sister, Mrs. Love Thompson of Portland, Oregon, and nine grandchildren.

The funeral services were conducted at the family residence Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Additional services were held at the Methodist Episcopal church in Hallsville, south of Circleville, Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock Central standard time. Burial was made in the Hallsville cemetery.

No Poisonous Charcoal

Neither willow charcoal nor any other charcoal could contain an actively poisonous substance, since charcoal has necessarily been prepared at high temperatures, and all of the volatile and active materials have been driven off. In a chemical way charcoal is an inactive neutral substance.

Whippet racing is the latest fad of the screen stars in Los Angeles. Pauline Starke and Matt Moore are shown starting dogs in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer championship race.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Cincinnati—Emil J. Ulrich, 56, shot and killed his wife, Caroline, 36, at their farm home near here and then committed suicide by turning the gun on himself. Mrs. Ulrich's body was found in the kitchen. Her head was partially torn away by a charge of buckshot. His body was in the basement, his head also partly blown off. A stick and a shotgun, lying nearby indicated Ulrich had used the stick to manipulate the trigger of the gun in ending his own life.

Canton—Five prisoners tore up a lavatory in a cell, pried up a plate in a steel door, dropped into the basement and escaped from the county jail Sunday night. Those who escaped were: Charles Pitts, awaiting trial on a charge of carrying concealed weapon; Fred Strauss, Charles Hudson, Michael Thornton and Thomas R. Morton, all awaiting trial on burglary charges.

Ben Rudner, who goes on trail next month charged with the murder of Don R. Mellett had no part in the jail break.

Cleveland—Is assured a season of Metropolitan grand opera annually for the next five years. Concerts have been signed for an entire week of opera starting May 2. A committee has started work to assure success of the undertaking.

Cleveland—Rev. James A. Rutledge, 73, widely known in Methodist Episcopal church circles in northern Ohio will be buried Wednesday from the home of his son in Jewett, Ohio. He died Sunday.

Cleveland—An automobile, struck a family waiting for a street car Sunday night, killing Andrew Poratz and injuring two members of his family.

Findlay—J. C. Donnell, 72, president of the Ohio Oil company and Findlay's leading citizen died of heart trouble at 3:45 o'clock Monday morning at his home on South Main street.

Donnell had been ill three and one-half weeks. He had rallied Sunday and it was believed that he was recovering.

Funeral services will be held at the home at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Rev. J. D. Lindsay, pastor of the First Presbyterian church will officiate.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Cammarn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Cammarn, 202 Thirteenth avenue, to Mr. Burnett Jeffrey Minier, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Minier of Port Clinton, took place at noon New Year's day at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. C. C. Kennedy of Marysville, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal church officiating. Close relatives were the only guests. The bride wore a dress of white flat crepe and carried a bouquet of roses showered with lilies of the valley. Mr. and Mrs. Minier will be at home in Circleville, after a short trip. The bridegroom is a former student of Ohio State university and a member of Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity. — Columbus Dispatch.

Rt. Rev. Monsignor S. P. Weisinger pastor of St. John the Evangelist church, officiated at the marriage of Miss Anne Glackin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Glackin, 898 South Twenty-second street, and Mr. Fred Gibson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Gibson, 1578 Bryden road, Wednesday afternoon, January 5, at 2 o'clock at St. John's rectory, 648 South Ohio avenue, Columbus. Miss Mary Glackin and Mr. William Glackin, a sister and brother of the bride, were the attendants. The bride wore a gown of jungle green crepe romaine and a small green silk hat. Miss Mary Glackin wore a black flowered chiffon frock and a tan silk ribbon hat. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. Gibson and his bride left for Chicago, where they will be at home at 4232 Kenmore avenue.

The bride was a former resident of this city.

BRIEFLY TOLD

—W. A. Downing and family, who have been making their home in the house owned by Miss Elizabeth Renick on East Union street for several years, will move to Washington C. H., where Mr. Downing has purchased a home.

STRANGER ILL.

John Harvey, of Ironton, a carpenter, who came up to this city last Saturday to work on the Chesapeake & Hocking railroad took suddenly ill and was taken to the city jail. Dr. Lloyd Jones was called and pronounced his illness, as the first stage of pneumonia. The man was without means and was taken to the County Home.

Sins Accumulate

Our sins, like to our shadows when our day is in its glory, scarce appeared; toward our evening how great and monstrous they are!—Suckling.

COUNCIL MEETS THIS EVENING.

The council will hold a special session this evening to take up the matter of the Chesapeake & Hocking railroad going thru this city, and the crossings at Mill, Mound and Main streets and also taking care of sewers that may pass under the railroad. It will be an informal meeting. The matter of paving that portion of Mound street that will be covered by the viaduct crossing Mound and Main street near the Scioto river bridge. Citizens are requested to come and voice their opinion on the new conditions that will arise over the passing thru of the new railroad.

BOY HEALER

Eleven-year-old Abram George, Indian boy-healer, who it is said has already healed scores of people by "laying on his hands." So great was the press at one time during a meeting in Rochester, N. Y., that the boy collapsed from exhaustion.

UNDERWENT OPERATIONS

Marjorie Leach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Leach of East Franklin street, who recently underwent an operation for the removal of her adenoids and tonsils is getting along nicely. Dr. Stewart performed the operation.

Mrs. Clifford Sowers, of West Main street, who was taken to Mt. Carmel hospital Columbus, underwent an operation last Wednesday. The operation was successful and she is getting along as well as could be expected.

Cincinnati—Bandits kidnaped Harry Cawein and Edward Becker employees of a grocery and robbed them of a satchel containing $1,300. The victims had just left one of the grocery company's chain stores when they were overtaken by the bandits.

First Horses in America

The first horses were brought to the West Indies and Mexico by the Spanish explorers. The story of the first horse ever brought to America is not known.

MAD STAMPEDE FOLLOWS BOY'S SCREAM OF FIRE

Eighty Children Suffocated on Panic in Montreal Theater Fire.

Seventy-seven children, averaging 11 years of age were smothered, crushed or trampled to death when they tried to make their escape from the balcony floor of a burning moving picture theater at Montreal, Quebec, January 9.

The owner, Emile E. Lawland, and the assistant manager, ticket taker, and doorman were taken into custody about midnight Sunday night and held pending a coroner's inquest. It was expected that they will be charged with violating a law of the Province of Quebec prohibiting the admission of children under 16 to a theater not accompanied by a parent or guardian.

With the grimest of irony, the film being flashed on the screen at the time an usher shouted "fire" and the panic broke out was "Get 'Em Young." About a thousand people were in the house at the time, most of them on the lower floor, but the balcony, because of the cheap admission, was filled largely with children. All those on the lower floor and those who used the west stairway down from the balcony escaped uninjured.

It was at a bend five steps from the bottom of the left stairway that the terrified children become hopelessly wedged and died.

The living and dead were wedged so tightly in the turn of the stairway that policemen and firemen were compelled to chop holes into the walls and stairs before they could extricate the human mass.

Priests moved thru the throng administering the last rites of the Catholic church to the dying. Never Catholic church to the dying. Never scenes been witnessed.

Lieutenant Charbonneau, a member of the Salvage squad, described the scene on the narrow stairs as "the worst I have ever encountered."

"When I got there," he said, "the stairway was jammed. We pulled the bodies, living and dead, out the best way we could. I have been fighting fires a long time, but have never encountered anything so horrible."

"Little children stretched their hands out of the struggling mass crying 'Save us, save us.' We got ropes over the shoulders and bodies of those we could reach, but it was not until ten or fifteen men hauled together that we were able to pull them out."

The fire itself, which was believed to have been caused by a short circuiting of a wire, was in itself of no consequence. There would have been no deaths except for the stampede.

About 30 victims were in hospital Monday, mostly children, some of whom were expected to die.

AUTO COLLISION.

A Ford roadster in which four young people were riding collided with another Ford machine in which two people were riding at the Adelphi and Kingston cross roads near Leistville Sunday evening about 7 o'clock.

Miss Marie Arledge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harley Arledge, was the only one injured. She was taken to the home of Ferd Dumm and Dr. Barton was called. Miss Arledge's bruises were only slight. She received an injury to her head. She was taken to the home of her by her attending physician.

LIMA MAN HAS VALUABLE VIOLIN

Lima, Jan. 8.—A genuine Stradivarius violin, one of the most valuable musical instruments in the world, is now owned by George Charlton, Lima photographer, although it is to be kept in the Bank of England, at London.

The "Strad" was bequeathed to Charlton by an uncle, Wiseman Charlton, of Manchester, who recently died at the age of 84. Only a few Stradivarius violins remain in the world today and they are highly prized as relics.

Charlton says the instrument will remain in the bank vault where it is now kept, because "England has been its home and I believe my uncle would prefer that it be kept there."

Gyroscope on Railroads

During the year 1926 the gyroscope was first used in the railroad field. It is now used by railroads to bring about more comfortable riding over the rails, it being explained that in this application it "functions as the heart of an extensive recording device to measure and locate uneven spots and other irregularities in the track."

Corn Casserole Dishes

THERE is no better ingredient for a savory, tempting-looking casserole dish than corn. A can of corn, alone with seasoning, or in combination with other foods, makes a delicious casserole.

CURRIED CORN — Chop two small onions, brown in a heaping tablespoon of butter in a casserole. Stir in a heaping tablespoon flour, half tablespoon curry powder, cup of gravy or soup stock and simmer ten minutes. Stir in a can of corn and bake in covered casserole for half an hour.

CASSEROLE OF CORN AND PEAS — A can each of corn and peas is used for this dish which may serve as the only vegetable of the meal. Put the corn, peas and seasoning in the casserole dish in layers, moistening each layer with left-over canned tomatoes or tomato puree.

Corn should make the top layer. Bake for twenty-five minutes.

SCALLOPED VEGETABLES — A can of succotash, which contains corn and lima beans, makes an excellent basis for scalloped vegetables. Add half cups of other vegetables, left over or from buffet sizes, such as cauliflower, onions, stringless beans. Mix with a cup of well seasoned white sauce, put in a casserole dish and sprinkle top with grated cheese. Bake twenty minutes.

OYSTERS SCALLOPED WITH CORN — One and a half cups dried bread crumbs, four tablespoons butter, dozen and a half oysters, No. 2 can of corn, salt and pepper. Put crumbs, oysters, corn, salt and pepper in layers in greased casserole, canned tomatoes or tomato puree, may form another layer. Top with buttered crumbs, bake twenty minutes.

Peter Piper's Pickles

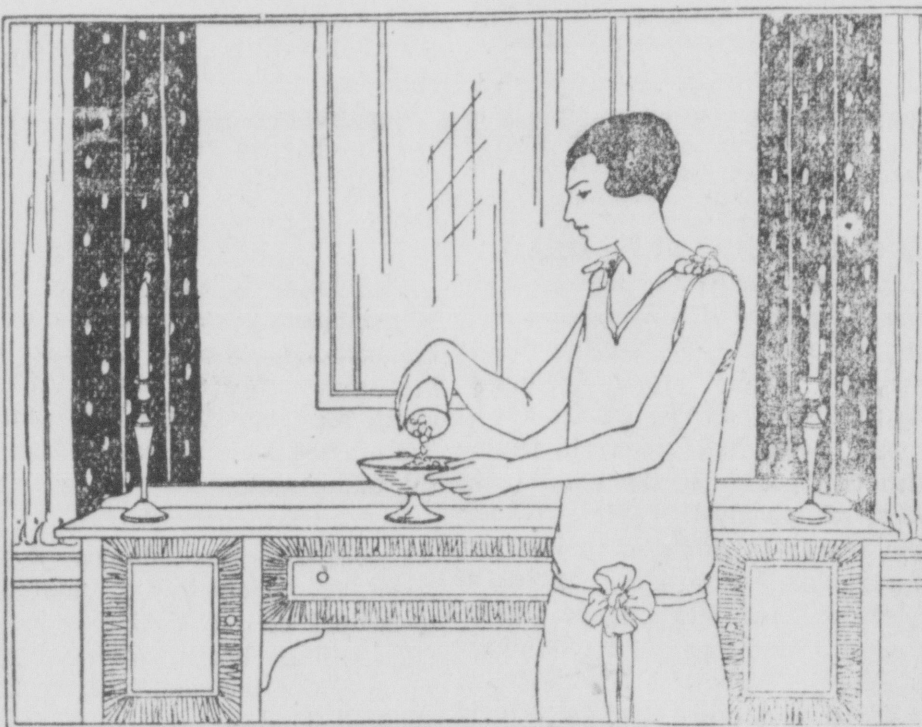

Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers.
A peck of pickled peppers Peter Piper picked.
If Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers,
Where's the peck of pickled peppers Peter Piper picked?

PETER Piper's pickled peppers are probably where so many more good pickles can be found.—safely stored in cans awaiting the housewife's pleasure. The many varieties of these piquant tasting pickles may all be purchased in sanitary tin containers which keep them moist and good until needed.

Among the kinds that can be bought canned are, cauliflower, chilies, cucumbers, best known in the form of "dill pickles," gherkins, (sweet and sour), mango melons and onions. A mixture of these different varieties comes with a mustard sauce in the most popular of all pickled sauces, "chow-chow." Piccalilli, a minced mixture of pickles without mustard is also widely known.

With cold or hot meat, pickles add good flavor. As a culinary ingredient, in sauces and as seasoning, for casseroles and sautéed foods, they are also excellent. For picnics, of course, pickles are almost indispensable. An appreciation of the worth of canned pickles is found in the growing demand for them. One cannery reports its output increased ten times in the space of six years.

Sweetmeats at their Best

THE holiday season with its festivities and merriment brings the best of toothsome goodies to the fore. Shelled and salted nuts, glace fruits and nuts constitute the more distinctive type of sweetmeat. When purchased in attractively decorated tin boxes, they make excellent individual gifts. When serving sweets, these glace fruits and nuts make this service a pleasure.

Glaze fruits are so easily damaged in appearance by the ordinary pasteboard box that the tin container is a real necessity. It is strong and tight, keeping the fruits in all the delicious juiciness that is their best quality. No danger of shrunken, wrinkled skins and gummy sugar coatings. These fruits are crisply coated outside and lusciously fresh within. Glaze nuts, too, are best when kept in these snug tin boxes, which also insure their freshness.

The growing demand for shelled nuts, so popular for table service and as culinary ingredients, is responsible for the pecking of California walnuts in vacuum tin boxes. The wise housewife or hostess knows that this is the best way to buy nuts, since they are packed shortly after they are picked and kept intact their valuable nut oil, their fine flavor, until the can is opened. The quality of the nut meat is assured, since only the very finest of the nut crop is packed in this style.

Keep a can of nuts for salads, cakes, puddings, poultry stuffing, and other cooking uses. They are handy, too, to serve at an impromptu card game or party. As a bon voyage gift, a tin box of nuts is always welcome.

Hot One

The story is told of two opposing English politicians who met in the parliamentary lobby and smoothed over their differences. But the opposition fangs did not remain in very long. "Why is it that you always heap coals of fire on my head, comrade?" asked the Socialist M. P. "I heap coals of fire on your head because I love the smell of a wood fire," was the Tory retort.—Boston Transcript.

Tam Effects New.

The extremes of the mode meet in millinery this season. The popular felt, with its smart vagabondage simplicity, goes one way of the mode to meet at the other extreme the chic African toque and tam sponsored by Agnes. So that one inclined to sport-like simplicity is as smartly in favor today as the modishly topped wearer of the high-crowned Agnes turban which so resembles the African belle's headdress from which, indeed, it was copied by the famous Parisian milliner.

Just as the lines of the new chapeaux differ so do the materials out of which they are made. Fashion dictates a variety of fabrics in felt as well as in velvets. There is the ordinary felt, the soft, shining feutre soieil and the taupe soieil, another new felt which has an Angora-like texture. Velvet, so long attempting to break into the monopoly of the felt vogue, has at last attained its goal with a bang of popularity that augurs an indefinite stay. Velvets plain, and velvets combined smartly with ribbons of satin, grosgrain and felts fashion the new hats of utmost chic.

Outstanding in the mode, because of its newness, is the softly draped high-crowned velvet hat. Some recede from the forehead to resemble the silhouette of the African belle's head, and some are draped low on the side with long, sweeping trimmings. It is from these two basic principles that the new African turban goes its numerous chic ways.

The wide-brimmed felt trimmed with a narrow contrasting band, worn by Marion Davies, film star, and the narrow-brimmed felt trimmed with a wide band, chosen by Louise Lorraine, the well-known motion picture player, are outstanding hats of the sport type. Brimless turbans of velvet, draped in various smart new ways, are attracting much attention.

Metallic Fabrics Gain With Fashionable Women

The popularity of the metallic fabrics, gold and silver cloth, lame and brocaded silks and metal combined, remains in the ascendancy. More and more are the scintillating and glistening imported fabrics being utilized for the development of the elaborate negligees, while even the mannish tailored robes are claiming a share of shimmering materials. These same fabrics along with many of the all-silk patterns in sharp high colors are used profusely in negligees.

Large sleeves and side drapes are noted features. Ostrich, curled and uncured, marabou, and the combination of both, are seen as trimmings in all colors and styles.

Printed silks are shown in straight pullman types banded with plain colors to match or contrast.

Gold moire lame, silver and jade metal cloth, and cleverly blended oriental colorings in a gold background are all displayed among brocaded chifons and satins.

Quilted robes reveal pastel shades with plain trimmings, embroidery in an all-over pattern atop of the quilting, fine lace in rows and flower treatments.

Several colors combined in flat bands are seen on a robe of small quilting, while another model displays an all-over embroidered design on a peach body, and puffing at the collar, cuffs and pocket.

Pajamas strike an unusual note in their vest effect, and use of the Russian collar lines and side openings. A distinctive model of violet crepe de chine is banded in three shades of velvet ribbon, which in turn are outlined in gold thread.

New Girdles Fit Waistline

New fashions that emphasize a natural waistline demand something more than the boneless corsette which has been sufficient with straightline frocks. A new girdle created to meet the needs of the woman whose figure must conform to the modern silhouette has side panels in back lacings to adjust it to the figure at each wearing.

HIGHWAYS PAY
21 PER CENT

The State Highway Commission announces that traffic on the state highways of California has increased 93 per cent in the past four years and that the total automobile mileage of the state now amounts to 2,120,000,000 miles.

The figures are obtainable by actual count effected by the commission's employees at 103 different points in California. There are around 1,500,000 automobiles registered in California. If the Commission's mileage estimate be accepted, there is a grand average yearly mileage of 1,400 miles per car—on state highways alone, which, of course does not include town or city travel.

Now let us see what light these figures shed on the state highway's system, regarded as a money investment. The people's outlay for modern highways, to date, has been about $100,000,000. How well has this investment paid?

The largest item of profit, that of new commerce, time-saving and cheaper haulage of goods, cannot be computed or even estimated in money at all. It is huge.

The other great item of human gain, which is recreational, also cannot be stated in dollars and cents.

Suppose those 2,120,000,000 miles had been traveled over the old dirt roads, with chuckholes, bad grades, haphazard turns and poor traction. Isn't it well within the facts to put the saving of car expense at one cent a mile?

And that means a saving of $21,200,000 a year in tires, springs, gasoline and depreciation! At that rate, we could rip out our entire state highway system every five years, and rebuild it out of the amount saved in the wear and tear of automobiles.—Los Angeles Examiner.

Women and Birthdays

The custom of remembering the birthdays of prominent men is well established in the United States. Several dozen in the course of each year have the opportunity of announcing that they are spending the day "quietly at their desks." Some newspapers even have good old-time daily "birthday corners." The custom, however, has not generally been extended to the women. Many members of the "sex"—as it is used to be called—take not at all kindly the reminder that another year has wasted them that much nearer to the "dangerous age"—or away from it. So recognition of the birthdays of prominent women may never become common.—Philadelphia Ledger.

NATION'S CHILDREN BEHAVING BETTER

Marked Decrease in Delinquency Is Observed.

Washington.—"In response to many requests," Secretary of Labor Davis in his annual report for the fiscal year of 1926 states that "the children's bureau has just assembled such information as can be secured from the annual reports of juvenile courts, and reports of the bureau of census with reference to the trend in juvenile delinquency. A study of this material indicates (1) that the present condition of the juvenile court statistics is unsatisfactory and (2) that according to the evidence available juvenile delinquency has decreased.

"Lack of uniformity in methods of compiling statistics used in the courts and marked variations in inclusions and methods of presentation make the statistics practically valueless for purposes of comparing delinquency rates in one city with those of other cities. The fact that for only 14 cities of 100,000 population and over in the United States can information be obtained on which delinquency rates can be computed over a period of years indicates the woeful inadequacy of statistical material regarding the work of an institution as important as the juvenile court.

Figures for Fourteen Cities.

"The figures for these 14 widely separated cities—Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Detroit, Minneapolis, New Orleans, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, Richmond, Rochester, St. Louis, Seattle, Washington—covering in most instances the 10-year period from 1915 to 1924, doubtless indicate the trend in juvenile delinquency. That 9 of the 14 show a decrease in the delinquency rate (i. e., the number of cases of delinquency per 1,000 children of the delinquency age fixed by the juvenile court law) furnishes a strong presumption that sensational statements regarding increase of juvenile crime do not have a basis in fact.

"Moreover, much more reliable figures as to commitments to institutions, based on census reports covering the entire country, indicate a decline in the number of delinquent children committed to institutions, if growth in population be taken into consideration, and reveal no significant increase in the numbers committed for the more serious offenses—homicide, robbery and burglary. According to the census reports, the age of commitment to penal institutions has not decreased, as has frequently been asserted.

Plan for Reporting Published.

"The plan for reporting of juvenile court statistics of delinquency and neglect on which the children's bureau has been at work for some years was published during the year as a bulletin entitled 'Juvenile Court Statistics.' This bulletin contains an introductory statement of the purpose of juvenile court statistics and the methods by which they may be obtained and a description of the plan proposed by the children's bureau, with outlines of the statistical cards to be used and the tables to be compiled.

"In the preparation of the plan the bureau had the co-operation of the committee on records and statistics of the National Probation association and of others who are familiar with statistical problems of the courts.

"A representative of the bureau is now visiting courts and state departments having supervisory authority or power to require reports from juvenile courts, and is working out with these courts and departments the methods by which the plan may be made to fit in with present systems of recording, filing and summarizing the data called for. The co-operation of a number of courts and state departments has already been assured."

Steals His Own House; Makes Police History

Los Angeles.—Detective Lieutenants Curry and Bradley of the Lincoln Heights station went gunning for plumbing fixture thieves and assert they discovered "a new one for the book" in the person of a man who purloined his own house.

Their search led them to Wilmar, where the detectives arrested A. C. Carlander and his cousin, Rudolph Carlander, after they assert, the men admitted having stolen various sinks, heaters, bath tubs and other plumbing fixtures with which their Wilmar homes were fitted.

"And on the way in," Curry said, "A. C. admitted he had moved the house we found him in ten miles from the 800 block on Bullard avenue, where he had erected it, to 2939 Gladys avenue, Wilmar, after he had decided he couldn't make scheduled payments on it when they fell due. We understand he has made several payments on the land."

The prisoners were locked up in the Lincoln Heights station on burglary charges in connection with the asserted stolen plumbing fixtures.

Food Importance of Pineapple

Ques.—What food elements are found in pineapple?

Ans.—Practically all, protein, carbohydrates, minerals, especially.

Ques.—Which has more food value, raw or canned pineapple?

Ans.—They are essentially the same in food elements, however, owing to sugar in which Hawaiian pineapple is preserved, the latter contains carbohydrates in far greater amount.

Ques.—What about vitamins?

Ans.—Vitamins are present in notable amount in fresh pineapple and experiments have shown that canning does not destroy them.

Ques.—Which has more calories?

Ans.—Canned pineapple has three times as many calories.

Ques.—Which is cheaper?

Ans.—A good-sized raw pineapple, of which much is wasted, costs about thirty-five cents. A large can of pineapple, with no waste costs about thirty cents, therefore canned pineapple is cheaper.

COLLEGE LEADERS OUSTED AS RESULT OF GAY PARTY

Say Shelley and Keats Were Also Canned and They May Emulate Those Writers.

Lake Forest, Ill.—"Well, Shelley and Keats were canned, and they lived to write many an ode—and so will we."

Which was the parting shot of Harold Trounsett, twenty-one, and Carl Ek, twenty-three, as they walked arm in arm, in disgrace, so to speak, off the campus at Lake Forest college. They had been expelled and given just 24 hours to clear out, for they had been caught with gin and girls in their rooms in Blackstone hall.

They were leaving, they said, for New York, but what to do they couldn't say—except probably to emulate Shelley and Keats—although they didn't say anything about heading for Italy.

Ek leaves the college literati flat, for he was known at the school as the "H. L. Mencken of the Campus." Trounsett likewise leaves a hole, for he was no less a personage than president of the sophomore class. The story is a sorry one; as Ek brightly remarked before leaving: "It might be called the sad tale of a flat tire."

Trounsett is a big youth from Iron Mountain, Mich. Ek, more slight and pale, is from Goshen, N. Y.

"Last night," Ek said, "Trounsett and I borrowed an automobile for a date with two of the Lake Forest—town, not college—girls. We started driving and right away got a flat tire."

"Well, there was no place to take the girls, so we brought them here to our rooms in Blackstone hall. We didn't sneak in, mind you, we walked right in."

"Yes," interposed Trounsett. He doubled his fist, the fist of a man from the iron country. "I'd like to know the dog who snitched, I would."

He referred to the fact that while he and Ek and their fair companions were drinking and dancing one of the other men students in that section of Blackstone hall went to Garrett H. Levertton, dean of men, and reported it.

In response to the "snitch" Dean Levertton entered. And that was why Ek on leaving delivered himself about Shelley and Keats.

"Yes," he said, "they were kicked out of school, too."

Lake Forest college is a co-educational school. It has about 350 students.

Tibetans Link Electric Lights With "Evil One"

Delhi.—Messages of mysterious happenings in Lhasa, the capital of Tibet, have been percolating through the wild passes of southern Tibet into Northern India. A report brought by shaggy-haired and primitive Tibetan muleteers states "somebody who is in league with the evil one had succeeded in creating lights which outshine the sun at noon."

The explanation seems to be that R. D. Ringang, a young Tibetan nobleman, who has been studying electrical engineering in England, has reached the goal of his ambition, to electrify the "Forbidden City" of Lhasa.

Several months ago Ringang took a shipment of electric light appliances out from England, but nothing had been heard of him since. His purpose was to harness the waterfall near Lhasa and introduce electricity into his native city.

Creates Special Tribunal for Royalty in Japan

Tokyo.—Japanese princes of the imperial blood never have had occasion to sue each other in courts of law. Disputes have always been settled personally by the emperor himself.

The privy council, however, feeling that legal redress should be given such members who might wish it, has adopted new regulations governing such proceedings. Under the ruling any princely lawsuit would be tried by special judges appointed by the imperial household department under imperial sanction.

Members of the imperial family would not be required personally to attend trials, but need only be represented by their attorneys. The regulations also provide that no prince or princess may be summoned before a police court.

Aging Army Officers Seek to Better Fate

Washington.—Escape by the army from approaching prospects of gray-bearded captains and age-worn majors is planned in a promotion study just completed by a special War department committee and approved by the general staff. It will be transmitted to congress in the form of a legislative recommendation.

Congress called for a report on the army promotion situation at the last session, and officers in the lower grades hope that the next session will clear the way for them to step up a grade or two before they are retired on account of age.

Secretary Davis is studying the proposal and went over it with Representative W. Frank James of Michigan, acting chairman of the house military committee.

CALLS DAUGHTER DIVORCE HOSTAGE; WINS HER CASE

Mother Says Child Was Held by Father to Force Her to Free Him.

Chicago.—Obvious excitement on the part of Mrs. Alice G. Agard, 3740 Pine Grove avenue, when she appealed to Superior Judge Joseph Sabath for a divorce, aroused the judge's interest. He questioned her and she said her five-year-old daughter, Johanna, had been held hostage a year and a half by her husband, Nelson Agard, wealthy publisher, to force her to get a divorce.

Judge Sabath immediately ordered the child brought into court and the mother and little girl met for the first time in 18 months. Mrs. Agard clasped her daughter in her arms and both wept joyfully.

Even though she had reclaimed the girl, she elected to obtain a divorce, anyway, and resumed her testimony, charging cruelty. She was granted a decree.

Mrs. Agard said that early in the summer of 1925 she was living at the Buena Terrace hotel. She testified that her husband, then a magazine publisher in Chicago, now living in South Haven, Mich., kidnaped the child, who was playing in the hotel lobby. Then, according to her story, Mrs. Agard received this message, through an attorney: "You may have your child back when you obtain a divorce."

Later Mrs. Agard made an appointment to meet her husband in Boston in an attempt to get possession of the child, but he failed to appear, she said.

Finally, despairing of obtaining custody of her child in any other manner, she filed suit for divorce.

"But I wouldn't have him as a husband now," she declared. "I've got my child back and that's all I want."

Coffee-Drinking King Uneasy After 62 Cups

Fergus Falls, Minn.—A new version of "uneasy lies the head that wears the crown" came into existence in the case of Gust Comstock, world's champion coffee drinker.

After sipping sixty-two cups of coffee in twelve hours he could not sleep. Comstock, who drinks an average of twenty cups a day, and who sleeps like the proverbial top ordinarily, reverted to his usual form after a period of restlessness.

His performance, marked by the tripling of marks set by eleven contestants, resulted in the breaking of his own record of fifty-six cups, established at Hibbing two years ago.

Comstock's pride was aroused when he was presented with a belt, studded with sixty-two coffee beans, each representing a cup in the world's championship mark. In the evening he was an honor guest at an American Legion banquet.

The champion, who is employed as a porter at a local barber shop, plans to "rest up" before taking on any challengers.

CAR INSPECTION IS WINTER NEED

Overhaul Battery, Brakes, Tires and Radiator.

Winter is the most exacting time of year on automobile performance. It is during this period that the little things about the car which ordinarily would go unnoticed during the spring, summer and fall months develop into serious trouble. Motors get cold and hard to start, with the consequent drain on the battery, valves do not always function properly, oil congeals in the transmission and differential and makes gears hard to shift as well as cars hard to get under way; the clutch shifts harder, and down through the thousand and one things that, co-ordinating, make for the satisfactory operation of an automobile.

Profits by Experience.

The experienced motorist remembers troubles of other years and sets about to profit by it. He takes his car into the service station and has it checked over and whatever work necessary done. Next he visits his battery man, if the service station does not operate a battery department, and sees that his battery is in good condition. A good battery is more essential during the winter months than any other time of the year.

Cars are harder to start and lights are burned more hours a day, with the consequent greater drain on it. To offset this there are not the long trips over week-ends or even the drive at nights to help charge the battery, as in the summer months. It is estimated that in ordinary service the battery is called on to do 50 per cent more work than during the summer.

In the matter of oil care should be used. A lighter oil is recommended for winter. Likewise it should be changed more often because the frequent use of the choke in starting a cold motor means that there is going to be more or less crankcase dilution, which destroys the lubricating qualities of the oil.

Use Antifreeze Mixture.

Every motorist puts one of the numerous antifreeze mixtures in his radiator. Before doing so he should flush it out, thereby removing any accumulation of sediment or rust that may have gathered, thus insuring a freer circulation of water. It is well at this time to examine the hose connections, and if the car has had considerable service it might not be a bad idea to replace them, because the rubber has a tendency to disintegrate, thus impeding the circulation.

Brakes should be adjusted, for during bad weather more dependence must be put in them than at any other season.

Tires, if worn, ought to be replaced, for the water, snow and ice will work into the tread cuts and perhaps cause trouble at a most inopportune time.

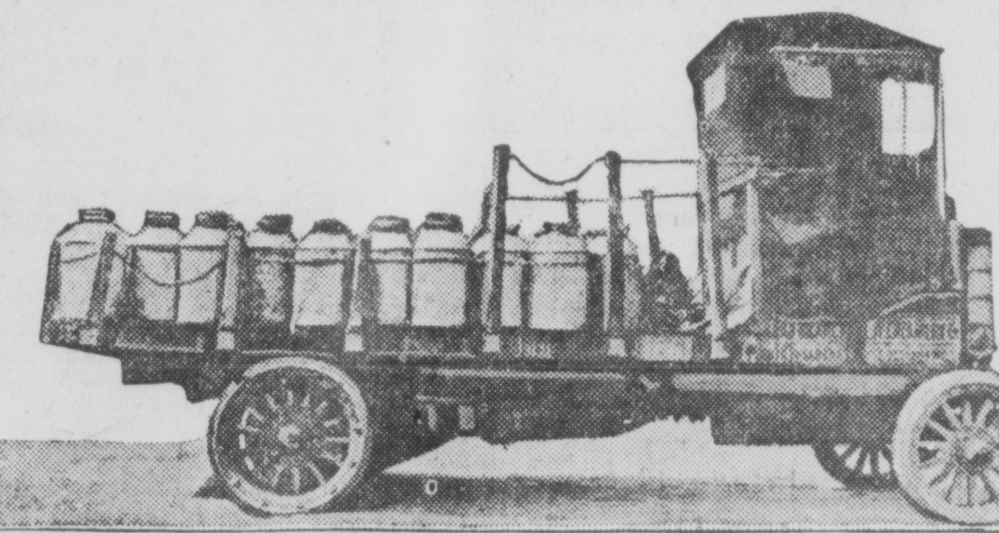

Installation of Louver Covers Is Winter Hint

Here is a cold weather tip from an authority on automobile service, R. A. Armstrong, director of service for a big motor car company.

Installation of louver covers on the inside of engine hoods in cold weather is advised by Mr. Armstrong, even on cars equipped with devices for controlling radiator and engine temperatures. Both gasoline mileage and engine performance are improved by louver covers, he declared.

Satisfactory covers can be cut from ordinary card board and should be attached so as to close the louver openings by cord or wire tied around the fins of the louvers. Cold air thus is prevented from entering the engine compartment.

NEED MORE LIGHT TRUCKS FOR FREIGHT

An Ordinary Farm Truck Delivering Milk to City.

"Rules of the road" are revolutionizing the truck industry and truck traffic. Trucks now must keep up with the procession. This has become obligatory because of the demand for speedy transportation of goods and as a measure of safety affecting motorists of all kinds. As a result there has come a greater demand for lighter trucks, with more engine flexibility and greater ease in handling in heavy traffic.

Roads are becoming more and more congested, both with freight and passenger travel. State, county and municipal authorities are speeding up the pace. It is as much an error of driving today to run slower than the traffic stream as to run at reckless speed. The motorcycle officer who draws up alongside a car on a well-traveled road is as likely to shout "step on it" or "keep moving" as to hand out a summons for exceeding the speed limit.

Cause of Accidents.
Trucks have not been keeping the

Justice Rules All Must Use Judgment

Justice Howard Keener of Patagonia, Ariz., has made a ruling that criminal carelessness and manslaughter may not be charged, following traffic accident deaths, when the party suffering has been in fault in observing the rules of the road.

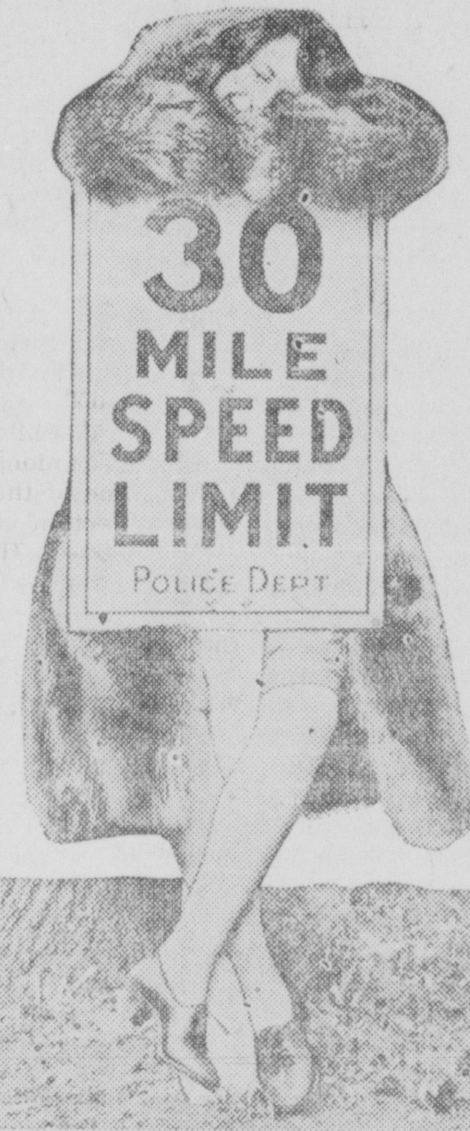

Alfred Hudgin had been charged with responsibility for the death of the daughter of Robert Reed of Fairbank.

It is found that while Hudgin had been driving in reckless manner the driver of the other car "could have avoided the accident had he used ordinary caution" and had not tried to pass Hudgin's car, even though the latter had been driving on the wrong side of the road.

Declaration was made by the court that the driver of a car, aware of danger, should use every effort to safeguard the lives of his passengers.

Massachusetts avenue had been raised that she fairly hugged the sign. Washington motorists can now do thirty miles an hour on that thoroughfare without fear of the dreaded "ticket."

Cold Engines Cause Trouble

One of the most important conclusions drawn from a recent investigation made by prominent automotive authorities was that 50 to 75 per cent of all automobile engine troubles are caused by cold engines. Engines that are hot to the touch, it was found, are not always hot enough to properly burn all of the gasoline supplied to the cylinder head.

The gasoline that is not exploded runs down the cylinder walls and washes the oil film of protection that should prevent scoring the cylinders. It also dilutes the oil in the crankcase and further reduces the effectiveness of the oil for protecting the moving parts of the engine.

AMUSEMENTS

Marshall Neilan, whose latest Paramount production, "Everybody's Acting" began a local run has every reason to feel pleased with his newest opus. It is a human and humorous little picture that tells a straightforward story with smoothness, sincerity and a wealth of colorful atmosphere.

Neilan really deserves a double-barreled salvo of applause, for he not only directed the photoplay, but wrote the story as well. Its background is that of the theater, and in the unfolding of the plot, we are given vivid, intimate glimpses of the backstage life of the average traveling stock company.

Whether or not, as has been rumored, Neilan based his story on a real life episode matters little. Certainly the central idea is plausible, the various incidents well within the realm of possibility and the characters true to life.

The author-director, incidentally, showed rare judgment in the choice of his players. Seldom has such a collection of seasoned favorites been assembled in one production. Betty Bronson is ideally cast as the wistful little orphan who is adopted by five god-fathers. She is charmingly natural as a girl of eight and just naturally charming later on as a miss of eighteen.

Ford Sterling, Raymond Hitchcock, Henry Walthall, Stuart Holmes and Edward Martindal acquit themselves with distinction in the roles of the fathers. Lawrence Gray makes a manly and romantic taxicab driver; and Louise Dresser is splendid as Larry's mother who divides her time between running her home and managing a big business organization.

The plot revolves around Betty who grows up under the loving care of her foster fathers, knowing nothing of the tragic circumstances surrounding her parentage. It is Miss Dressed, who, in an effort to break up the romance between Betty and Larry, uncovers the unpleasant fact that Betty's father murdered her mother and was hanged for the crime. The ending is both logical and satisfying.

x HARTMAN THEATER. x x x x x x x x x

The coming to the Hartman theater, Columbus, on Monday, January 10, of "The Vagabond King" accredited the most thrilling of all musical plays for a one-week engagement, will unquestionably interest many music-lovers and theater goers in this community. This production, which calls for a cast of one hundred and twenty-five people but recently closed its New York engagement after a run of five hundred and sixty-seven performances — a record of which, it is believed, will stand for a long time.

As most people know who keep in average touch with important theatrical affairs, "The Vagabond King" is based on the beloved Justin Huntley McCarthy drama, "If I Were King" so successfully and brilliantly played by E. H. Sothern some twenty-five years back. And now, they have taken the play out of the Sothern repertoire and fashioned it into a lovely and glamorous romance in four acts and seven scenes, the latter depicting Old Paris during the unholy reign of Louis XI, 15th century. Rudolf Friml, the young Bohemian composer of the scores of "Rose Marie" "Firefly" "Katinka" and other popular successes, provided the lyrical setting for "The Vagabond King" and wrote what eminent music authorities agree is his greatest light opera. The score abounds in immense choruses, the now-famous "Song of the Vagabonds" being acclaimed the most thunderous ensemble ever composed for the stage. Other delightful song hits the play include "Only a Rose," "Love Me Tonight," "Tomorrow," "A Flagon of Wine," (done by 30 male chorus) and "Huguet's Waltz." A beautiful corps de ballet and an orchestra of thirty are other noteworthy features of "The Vagabond King."

There will be matinees at the Hartman on Wednesday and Saturday and the theater management announces that mail orders for this extraordinary attraction, sent in from this place, will have special attention.

Repentance

"Marriage is taken far too lightly," remarked Edwin L. Kennedy, character actor. "Only the other day, two acquaintances of mine, who weren't even out of high school, were in court, the judge delivered them a lecture and finally asked the repentant bride when she first thought seriously of marriage."

"Two months after the ceremony" was her reply.—Los Angeles Times.

Druggists' Mortar Old

The druggists' mortar, which has come down to modern generations almost unchanged in shape, can be traced back to prehistoric times. The mortar in its present shape was used centuries before medicine was known as an art, and was used to crush hard bodies. It was used by savages as well as civilized peoples.

Dollar Dinner for Four

The daily task of planning a dinner menu that is "different" and yet not too expensive is apt to become pretty tedious, unless the housewife can pick up a helpful suggestion here and there. The following menu costs only $1.00 and serves four people.

Clam Chowder
Escalloped Sauerkraut with Bacon
Pea and Egg Salad
Apple Crush
Coffee

A CAN of clam chowder, all ready to serve after heating, costs 10 cents. A large can of sauerkraut costs 15 cents at special sales. Heat contents thoroughly; then put into casserole in alternate layers with white sauce, and lay a few strips of bacon across the top. Bake in oven until bacon is crisp and brown. This dish has high nutritive, vitamin and medicinal value.

A can of peas can be had for 13 cents. Drain and mix with 2 chopped eggs costing about 9 cents. Serve with mayonnaise or French dressing. A loaf of bread costs 10 cents.

Enough coffee for four people, at an average rate of 40 cents a pound, costs about 4 cents.

For the Apple Crush use one can of applesauce costing 13 cents and an envelope of jello costing 10 cents. Heat applesauce thoroughly and beat jello into it. Pour into cold, wet molds and set in a cool place. Serve with cream, if desired.

Total cost of main ingredients of this menu is approximately 84 cents, leaving 16 cents to cover cost of butter and sugar for the meal and the small amounts of milk, butter, flour and bacon used with the sauerkraut.

FORGETS CYNIC CODE; IS KILLEDBeau Brummel Safe Cracker and Outlaw Among Outlaws, Slain in Revenge.

San Francisco.—Clyde Hilliard, Beau Brummel safe-cracker, outlaw among outlaws, and feared for his trigger-finger, lived by a strangely cynical code:

"Never accept any man as your friend!"

Forsaking that code Hilliard died recently, a bullet in his brain, fired by an unknown hand.

With his death, San Francisco's underworld chorled. In the dank, smelly places where criminals planned and plied their trade there were smirks that bespoke a grim jest.

For the underworld had won a long and cunning race with the police to "deal justice" to this self-styled leader of its realm.

It had evened the score with Clyde Hilliard's too-well-known automatic.

Long ago the dapper "lady's-man-crook" had set cold lead as the penalty for those who should seek to cross his path, and he paid the same price.

They found his body, face down, in the dirt alongside the Skyline boulevard, south of San Francisco, early on the morning of September 20. A bullet wound was in the back of his head. Clyde Hilliard had never had a chance.

Half a mile distant, crawling on her hands and knees through the brush, blood streaming from a bullet wound in her temple, they found Gladys Fleming.

Hilliard, disbeliever in men, was never without his "woman."

Identification of the two was not immediately established on the morning of the crime, but when police had wiped aside the shroud of mystery they nodded knowingly.

"Well, boys, the score's tied!" said one of them.

Hilliard had gone the way he had sent Gene Bowen, ex-convict and member of the former's gang of master cracksmen, in a Green street apartment on the night of August 5.

Gladys Fleming, by chance of fate, had taken the same medicine that Hilliard meted out to the dashing Dorothy Wilson on the same night he killed Bowen—a bullet in the temple. Both women lived.

Score Is Tied.

So the score, in the main at least, was tied, so far as the underworld went. But this same underworld was now a good jump ahead of the police.

True, long ago the police had cornered Jim Fleming, second husband of the wounded Gladys, and sent him away to the "big house" at San Quentin for the killing of a "copper," but in this race to "get" Clyde Hilliard the "element" had won—hands down.

With a combination of hair dye, an alias and native cunning, Hilliard had slipped through the police net when it seemed that naught could save him. He had moved for a time in the circle that knew him best, undetected. He had played his game with the affections of women, and well.

But Clyde Hilliard discounted fate, and once placed on the defensive, he forgot the code by which he had lived:

"Never accept any man as your friend!"

Then they "got him."

The murder of Gene Bowen and the shooting of Dorothy Wilson in the Green street apartment, police said, had been "plain slaughter." The victims never had a chance. It was a "falling out of thieves," the detectives held, and later Mrs. Wilson bore them out.

Hilliard, she said, had not liked Eugene Bowen's division of the spoils in a recent gem robbery. So he took his long-avowed method of settling such disputes. Knocking at the door of the apartment in which Bowen and his sweetheart lived, he had spoken his greeting to the two within with a fusillade of pistol shots.

Bowen fell dead. Dorothy Wilson, lapsing into a state of coma from the effects of her three wounds, was determined to "get" Hilliard if it took her dying effort.

Reaching a pencil and a piece of paper and dropping to the floor she scrawled:

"Clyde done it—330 Post stre—"

When the police came she was unconscious. But they knew the rest of the unwritten story. Clyde Hilliard had "done it."

Drag-Net Thrown Out.

The drag-net was quickly thrown about the city and a systematic search of the underworld haunts was begun by the homicide squad.

They found that Hilliard and a girl named "Gladys" had hastily left their apartment at No. 1635 Polk street, where they lived in luxury as Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Bronson.

Two days later Dorothy Wilson had sufficiently regained her strength to identify positively rogue's gallery pictures of Hilliard as the slayer of Bowen.

"And if you don't get him, we will!" she told the police.

But Clyde Hilliard had not played his game so long for nothing, and he fooled both the police and the underworld. Fooled them until the game got "too easy," and he threw caution to the four winds. That was along in September.

On the night of September 10, Charles Brown, dapper but gray of hair, and somewhat sour of disposition, gave a "party" in a Sacramento street apartment. Liquor flowed freely and the general hilarity became obnoxious to other tenants in the building. The police were called when Brown's nervous trigger finger let loose three shots through a door panel.

Charles Brown and his six companions—four of them women—were jailed. One of the women was named "Gladys Grayson."

"What's the charge?" Brown asked the desk sergeant.

"Disturbing the peace," was the answer.

"What's the ball?" asked Brown. "Two hundred dollars apiece," answered the sergeant.

Charles Brown planked down $1,400 in currency on the sergeant's desk. Five minutes later he and his companions walked out of the hall of justice and disappeared into the night.

That was the beginning of the end of Clyde Hilliard. Twelve hours later the police fingerprint system had revealed that Charles Brown, released on bail for disturbing the peace, was none other than Hilliard, long sought as the murderer of Bowen.

It was the first clue the police had been given, but also it was the first clue that had come to the underworld friends of Eugene Bowen and Dorothy Wilson.

Knew "Water Was Hot."

Hilliard's hand had been "tipped." His new haunts, his new "make-up," his new aliases—all had been bared. And the hunted slayer knew that "the water was hot."

Scarcely forty-eight hours later and his body had been found by the Skyline boulevard, his wounded girl companion nearby.

Two hastily filled suitcases found 500 yards away added to the story.

The victim had been shot and hurled for dead from a speeding automobile. Identification of Hilliard satisfied the police of the motive for the killing. It was revenge. But how did the underworld "get" the wary Hilliard?

Gladys Fleming, recovering from her wounds in the San Francisco hospital, reluctantly gave the answer days later, after hours of grilling.

"Clyde forgot his code," she said.

"We knew we were in a dangerous position after our arrest in the Sacramento street apartment," she told the officers. "Clyde knew he hadn't a minute to spare. So we planned a quick getaway to Los Angeles."

"Just how to make the grade was a tough one to figure out and Clyde seemed worried."

"We were living in an apartment in the downtown district. Well, about two o'clock on the morning of September 20 there came a rapping at the door. With his gun in his hand Clyde answered."

"A man who seemed to be our friend declared the 'bulls' were on our trail and that we'd better sneak fast. He had a machine, he said, and would see that we got to Los Angeles. It was a stolen car, he said."

"Clyde always maintained that no man in the world was his friend, but this time he forgot his code. So we packed our grips and jumped into the man's car. We were headed for Los Angeles and when he took the Skyline boulevard it seemed reasonable enough. It was as we were riding along that he made some pretense about engine trouble, stopped the car, whipped out a revolver and opened fire."

Clyde fell first. Then he got me. He threw us out and disappeared."

Gene Bowen had been avenged.

Refuses to Tell.

Gladys Fleming, wife of a murderer consort of another, has steadfastly refused to bare the identity of the man who killed Hilliard and shot her, although they are satisfied that she is aware of his identity.

"Underworld ethics? No! Just fear!" said the officers.

Hilliard's death revealed the strange complexities of his nature. In the suitcase into which he had hurriedly thrown his belongings the police found mute evidence that the man he had been accused of killing was none the less his friend. In a double-backed picture frame they found two pictures. One was of Hilliard, the other was of Eugene Bowen. Back to back.

Big Jim Fleming, second husband of Hilliard's wounded consort, apprised of the shooting, in his cell at San Quentin, enjoyed his own inward chuckle at the gunman's fate, and bared his reasons for it.

"Hilliard was a crook among crooks," he said. "He was a robber of robbers, and he plied a rotten trade with a high hand."

Who fired the bullet that wrote "finis" on the last chapter of Clyde Hilliard's life even the police do not expect to discover.

The underworld will never tell. Gladys Fleming will never tell. Dorothy Wilson received the news of the slaying of Clyde Hilliard with an un-suppressed smile.

"Well, Gene still has his friends. I see!" she said.

The Wilson woman has declared, however, that she is "going straight."

The law never did have much success with Clyde Hilliard. Seven times between 1913 and 1925 he had been jailed in connection with as many robberies, burglaries and safe crackings. But the underworld "king" always had uncanny luck. His record shows nothing more than a scattering number of county jail sentences.

OHIO GENERALASSEMBLY WILL BE ASKED TO ENACT*Another New Law To Increase Number of Common Pleas Judges.

The Ohio general assembly will be asked to enact a law providing for the election of an additional common pleas judge in Franklin county to sit as a court of domestic relations, according to a resolution adopted by the Franklin county bar association.

At present the juvenile court of the county is supposed to function as a court of domestic relations, but the resolution says the business of this court has grown to such proportions that it is impossible for a judge to carry on the juvenile and probate work efficiently.

Under the bar association's plan the domestic relation court would take over the juvenile work as well as handle all divorce and separation cases.

Smith W. Bennett was named by President Don M. Hamilton as chairman of a committee to draft the proposed bill.

Figs—A Real Health Food

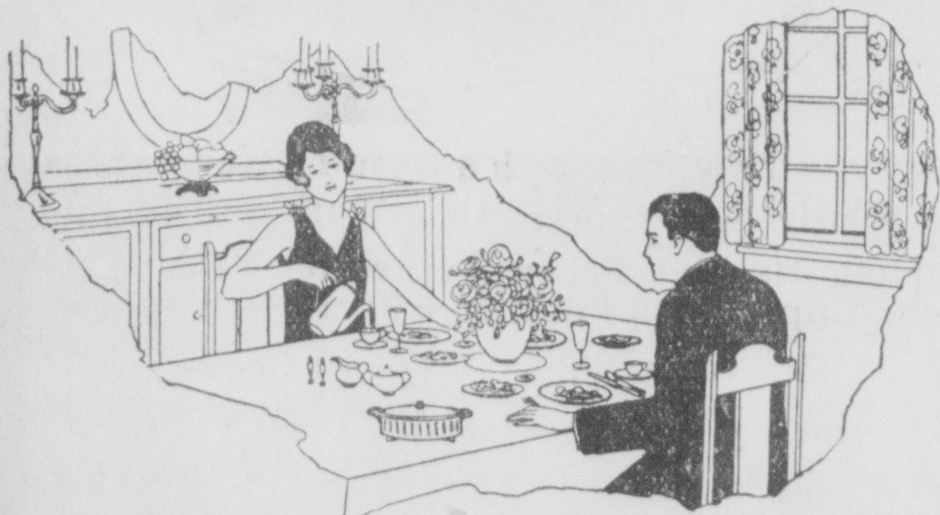

THE fig is one of nature's treasure sacks. All the while it is maturing, nature tucks into its skin the richest of fruit sugars, mineral salts and mild acids. Medical science says that figs are one of the best of corrective foods. They are triple starred on a recently published food chart. Figs exercise a tonic effect on the intestines and counteract any tendency to sluggishness.

Figs are native to our southern states and are delightful when picked ripe and served immediately. But one doesn't have to live in California or Texas to enjoy the real delight of fresh figs. They are canned for us when in the ripe, fresh state. We may enjoy them as breakfast fruit or dessert.

In famous Creole restaurants of New Orleans, figs are served in a compote, ice cold, with a little powdered sugar. Canned figs need nothing added to them to serve in this way.

Fig Meringue Pie—Bake a pastry shell. To one can of figs add half teaspoon grated orange rind. Mix two tablespoons cornstarch with a little water, add to figs. Boil together three minutes. Put in double boiler, cook fifteen minutes. Add tablespoon of butter, half cup of orange juice, two beaten egg yolks. Cook three minutes longer. Cool slightly, pour into pastry shells, cover with meringue made of two stiffly beaten egg whites and six tablespoons powdered sugar. Brown in slow oven (300 F) about ten minutes. This will make a delicious, healthful pie.

He—"That dinner certainly tasted good tonight!"

She—"I'm glad you liked it. You know it wasn't expensive either."

He—"No? How is that? It tasted like a million dollars."

She—"I take it that you like my new casserole dish."

He—"Yes, I do. It was made of salmon, I know. But what else?"

She—"Only some boiled rice and a can of tomatoes."

He—"Well how did you get it all done, when you only reached home half an hour before dinner?"

She—"Why, it didn't take five minutes to prepare the casserole and when it was in the oven, the dinner was practically ready."

He—"Five minutes! You must be a fast worker."

She—"No, not especially. All I did was put layers of rice, canned salmon and canned tomatoes in the greased dish, seasoning each layer with salt and pepper. That brown crust is only bread crumbs with melted butter poured on top. It took twenty minutes to bake, and meantime I made the fruit salad and set the table."

He—"That sounds simple enough. We must have it again."

She—"Yes, I like it too, especially because it is so inexpensive."

He—"Well, whatever it cost, it's worth twice as much!"

Growers Warned to Cull Damaged Corn

Injured Ears Result in Low Grades Being Set.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Heavy losses may be sustained by corn growers this year unless damaged corn is culled from market shipments, the Department of Agriculture says in a warning to producers.

The corn crop, especially in many sections of Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, contains a large proportion of damaged ears, according to reports of producers, grain dealers and grain inspection records. Market discounts will be assured unless shipments are free from damaged corn, the department says.

Damaged ears in the corn when shelled result in low grades being assigned the corn when it reaches terminal markets and is graded by licensed grain inspectors, it was pointed out. Low-grade corn takes a discount in price in approximate proportion to the quantity of low-grade-corn sent to market.

To prevent market discounts where shelled corn contains damaged kernels, corn producers and country corn dealers are urged by the department to pick out the damaged ears either at the time corn is husked in the field, when it is put into cribs, or when it is shelled. To obtain best results, the damaged ears should be removed at each of these three operations.

By removing the damaged ears before the corn is shelled, says the department, the remainder of the corn can be stored with less danger of becoming damaged, and such corn generally will grade higher by one or more grades, and sell more readily at a higher price by several cents per bushel. The damaged ears, while practically worthless on the market, will make fairly good feed on the farm.

Timothy Declared Poor Feed for Producing Milk

Clover, alfalfa and other legumes make far better hay for dairy cows and produce better milk than the best timothy, says C. C. Hayden, chief of dairy husbandry, Ohio experiment station. Yet questions coming to his department daily reveal the fact that many farmers still feed their milk cows timothy hay and corn stover.

The milk from cows fed timothy hay or stover and dry grains is low in vitamins, Mr. Hayden continues, and is not as valuable for children as that from cows fed bright legume hay. If timothy must be grown for hay it is best if cut very soon after the heads appear.

If no clover or alfalfa is coming on for use next winter, the best substitutes are soy bean hay or field peas and oats. The peas and oats are seeded together as soon as the ground can be prepared and the soy beans are seeded after danger of frost.

Value of Lime Learned by Progressive Farmers

We cannot grow legumes successfully without the use of lime, and we cannot improve our farm lands to any great extent without legumes. Furthermore, legume crops, besides drawing nitrogen from the air and storing it in soils for the benefit of other crops, and supplying organic matter which is necessary to enrich the land, furnish the very best feed for live stock.

It is an old saying that "a limestone country is a rich country." It is always a good country for producing clover and the grasses and fine cattle, horses, sheep and hogs. But any soil can be made a limestone soil by applications of pulverized limestone, and for this reason the use of lime is on the increase in all lime-lean sections where progressive farmers have learned something of its value.

Ohio Flocks Increased Egg Production in 1926

The average production of the poultry demonstration flocks in Ohio has increased from 97 eggs for the first nine months of 1925 to 111 eggs per hen for the past nine months of this poultry year.

Flock owners co-operating in this project of the Ohio State university agree to keep cost and production records. Specialists from the university help the owners to keep their flocks in best possible condition. These flocks serve as practical demonstrations of what proper methods and care will do.

Demonstration flocks are expected to double the state average production per hen this year. Last year the average hen in the state produced 70 eggs each, while the demonstration flocks averaged 138 eggs each.

William Pitt's Advice to Plant Trees Was Fit

The Aurora (Ill.) Beacon News says William Penn advised the colonists to plant trees in one acre in every five. When he said it the country was woods and not much else, and Penn's advice sounded foolish.

But today we have $1,000,000 acres of idle land in the United States, most of it east of the Mississippi river, and are confronted with a shortage in timber.

The center of the lumber industry today is in the Rocky mountain country. For the eastern states that means big freight bills. It is not too late, even now, to take Penn's advice. We need trees.

A Health Hint For Mothers

THIS is the season of greatest anxiety to the mothers of active, growing children—the season of cold rains and snow, of wet little feet, snuffling little noses and croupy little throats; the season of daily fears that coughs and colds may be the forerunners of much more serious children's ailments.

But the mother who wants to take the promptest and simplest precautions—and what mother does not?—may save herself many sleepless winter nights and perhaps cut down the winter's doctor's bills by following the example of the physician who specializes in children's diseases. For the modern physician is almost certain to look first of all at his child's throat. The delicate membrane of the throat frequently gives first warning of danger, great and small, in winter.

A daily examination of children's throats will show up the earliest symptoms of many of the most troublesome ailments. The rays of an electric flashlight, directed straight into the little mouths, will reveal plainly the throat condition. A normal throat is uniformly pink and smooth looking. Splotchy red or whitish looking places indicate some irritation and call for prompt medical attention and treatment which may ward off serious trouble.

FRANK L. STANTON POET LAUREATE

Of Georgia, Passes To His Reward—Was Member of Staff of The Atlanta Constitution.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 7.—Frank L. Stanton, aged 70, poet laureate of Georgia, and a member of the staff of The Atlanta Constitution for 40 years, died at his home here today. Among Mr. Stanton's best known poems are "Mighty Lak a Rose," "Lill Feller" and "Just a Wearyin' For You."

The note of cheer that graced his "Just from Georgia" column in the Constitution for 40 years was evident in his last work. On Christmas day the column appeared for the last time. On the next day he was indisposed and several days later was gravely ill.

Friends were with the poet almost every day in his office and home and many visitors always found his latch-string out. Of late years he had not been active physically but there were few mornings that some bit of bright verse did not appear in his place on the editorial page of his paper.

Stanton wrote his first verses in 1868, when he was 11 years old, and addressed them "To Lizzie," who was a sweetheart. Later he became a "copy boy" for the Savannah News and the verses he turned out at odd moments attracted the attention of Joel Chandler Harris, author of the "Uncle Remus" stories and at the time an editorial writer. Young Stanton became a member of the staff and until 1887 worked as news reporter and feature writer.

The weekly newspaper field attracted Stanton in 1888 and then he worked on the Rome, Ga., Tribune before going to the Atlanta Constitution.

Contrary to popular belief, Stanton lived and died a poor man; that is, poor in the sense that he realized comparatively little from the voluminous writing of two score years and he once remarked that he had little business in marketing his songs and poems.

RIDGES FORMED AS THE EARTH COOLED

Although originally a molten mass, our earth has gradually been cooling. During this process the crust hardened and then the next skin would solidify and shrink, and so on, the result being that the outside layers would tend to fall inwards, "wrinkling into ridges—our earliest mountain ranges. Cracks, too, would be formed, through which there would be eruptions, and other mountains were made with the thrown-up lava.

The enormously high original mountains were gradually worn down by rain and weather but as some of their stones would be harder than others, they would not wear evenly, and this again makes another cause for ridges. Rivers, too, would cut a way through soft earth, forming plains, but leaving the hard rock standing up as mountains.

Kelly Field, San Antonio, Texas, Jan. 7.—Two cadet fliers of Kelly Field, near here, were killed about five miles west of San Antonio today when their planes collided and crashed from an altitude of 1,500 feet.

Cadet Richard E. Terrell of Eagle Lake, Texas, was in one of the planes and attempted to make a turn, causing the wing of his plane to hit the wing of the plane in which Cadet Charles Shields Jr., of Durand, Mich., was flying. Both planes went into tail spins.

Softer Lines in Athletic Styles

Feminine Daintiness Characterizes Every Mode of Present Season.

With the coming of the winter sports season athletic styles come into their own again. This year, however, observes a fashion correspondent in the Louisville Courier-Journal, they are touched by the feminine daintiness that characterizes every mode of the season—even knickers that are worn as usual for skating and skiing are feminized by a softer silhouette and fabric, while sweaters are cut in less severe lines and the usual manish blouses are the most evident of paradoxes.

Last season the athletic young woman closely resembled the athletic young man, but this winter she will be the athletic young woman masquerading in clothes which, though they still carry a suggestion of the masculine, are totally unable to hide her essential femininity.

Frocks for sportswear may be one or two-piece, belted or unbelted. But invariably the waistline is normal, the skirt cut in straight lines, and the sleeves long and simple. Bloused treatments are favored, though not exclusively, while tucks, shirring and gathering are much in evidence.

The style for collars is not restricted—high collars, V neck, high V and Peter Pan—all are sponsored by Paris. Jumper frocks and jacket costumes are in high favor with the smart Parisienne for her wardrobe of sports dresses.

One-piece sports dresses are of jersey, silk or wool crepe, crepeella or kasha. The sleeves are generally full from elbow to wrist and banded with smocking or leather ornaments. Belts, the majority of them narrow, are made very decorative, in suede, leather or grosgrain ribbon. Many of the one-piece frocks are bloused, although draping is here carefully avoided, and little back yokes appear on some.

The hats for sportswear are attractive, jaunty little things, which must be tilted with something of an air. Felts and velours predominate, sometimes combined with velvet. Many are made with the irregular turned-down brim, slightly wider at the sides and tapering to nothing in the back.

These have so come to the fore of late that it does not seem likely that they will enjoy more than a moment's popularity with the more exclusive.

Felts With High Crowns.

Felts with high draped crowns are smartest, some with the crowns rising high off the forehead and receding slightly, others with the peak of the crown in back, sloping down to the dent above the forehead.

Black, beige, gray, purple, green, red and some shades of blue, are the hues most in favor for these small, closefitting hats, trimmed with tiny feathers or bands and bows of grosgrain ribbon in contrasting color.

An innovation for winter sportswear comes in the form of leggettes. They have been introduced in several woolen materials and suede, and add a wintry touch to the rest of the costume. They button or lace tightly from ankle to above the knee, and are made in every color. Although some extreme demiselles have worn them on the streets, their greatest vogue will be with skater or coaster in the winter resorts.

Your first consideration, even if your winter's journey takes you to the remotest recesses of the Canadian fairland, will be to incorporate atmosphere which the urban Parisienne has prescribed for this season—a definite and clearly expressed femininity in contradistinction to the recent fetish for boyishness.

The latter admittedly is better adapted to the active demands of the winter sportswoman—and so it will be your difficult task to preserve the practicality of last year's costume and yet feminize it by the introduction or addition of new and subtle details.

For such accessories as the hat, gloves, sweater, stockings and scarf, only the lightest-weight wool should be chosen—principally because it does not long remain wet and it will speedily recover its original shape, no matter how severely drenched. Gay colors are the rule for these woolen incidentals this season—otherwise they are not particularly distinguished. Hats must cover the ears and should be of a type that can be easily manipulated.

Above all, your winter sports wardrobe must be loose. First, because grace is never attained in heavy wraps through tightness, and secondly, because any hindrance to the circulation is neither comfortable nor healthy. A slenderizing effect is better obtained through loose garments.

Frock Suitable for Skating or Climbing; Blue-Green Jersey.

hanging gracefully than by means of snugly strapped wraps through which an ungainly bulging is bound to be visible at some place.

Convertible Type of Costume.

The ingenious minds of the French couture have originated a convertible type of winter sports costume which may be used for more than one of the exhilarating cold-weather sports. The separate, short-circular skirt which may be removed in zipper fashion and then becomes a scarf, is the characteristic type in this classification.

White and yellow are prominent in the winter sports mode. Striking are yellow woolen "plus threes" to be worn with a white silk jumper, over which appears a thick black coat lined with yellow crepe de chine.

Many of the Paris dressmakers feature culotte skirts for winter sports. Among these are Mary Nowitzky and Premet. "Le Ski" is the name of a Premet model consisting of a rose kasha frock with beige embroidery and a belted coat in beige pony. Among sports knickers, Premet shows little straight ones which look for all the world like a small boy's trousers. "Skating," by Premet, in the culotte category, is in fancy wool, trimmed with fur.

The Russian Cossack style of jumper or jacket is important for winter with its high close neck, most often in fur or fur-banded. Of course, fur is used down the side opening, as well as for the belt, be it broad or narrow. Decol accomplished this in a deep green kasha and uses white angora for the trimming. The blouse has an intricate side cut.

In the wake of the occasion hat in Paris, there has followed the occasion boot. Occasion dressing, in case you don't know it, means the wearing of distinctly different clothes for essentially different occasions. It is a reaction against last year's promiscuous exploiting of sports clothes and is a definite hall mark of the new chic. Today milady cannot purchase a single pair of shoes to go with all her daytime dresses nor one pair of glided slippers to go with her evening gowns. Her various daytime frocks require different kinds of shoes and there are infinitely more varieties of evening slippers from which to choose than gold.

For daytime black enjoys a popularity both artistic and practical. In order to harmonize throughout, of course, madame's slippers must match or blend with the rest of her costume, and since Paris expresses a preference for the black gown and coat, a natural demand follows for shoes of the same color. The only rival for the slipper of ebony is that of navy blue, which has suddenly found favor with the haute monde as a compromise between the extreme dark and the bright kid. Navy blue and black vie with each other, not only in accompanying dark clothing, but frequently as the foil for lighter shades.

The more colorful of the winter costumes are often made more effective by a finishing touch of matching slippers and hose.

FOUR BITE DUST IN HERRIN GANG WAR

FORTRESS AT SHADY NEST BLOWN UP AND DESTROYED

Factions Near Herrin, Ill., Still Warring on Each Other — Four Members of the Birger Gang Blown up a Bomb — Shelton Brothers Wreck Vengeance Against Their Competitors in Bootlegger War.

Four persons met death late Saturday night in the latest demonstration of southern Illinois gang warfare when Shady Nest, armed road house and Camp of Charles Birger, leader of one of the factions, was dynamited and burned. The deaths brought to 13 the total of those who have been killed within the last five months.

Shady Nest, 12 miles from Marion, Illinois, on a state highway leading to Harrisburg, Saline county seat, and just within Williamson county, had been maintained by Birger as a base of operations against the Shelton brothers gang. The gangs are engaged in a feud for supremacy in the coal belt liquor traffic. Machine guns, high powered rifles and revolvers were stacked in the place, which was headquarters for an armored truck the gang used for some time, but which lately had been dismantled.

Efforts to identify the bodies have been unsuccessful. They were burned beyond recognition, but it is believed that two are those of Steve George, caretaker and his wife. Sheriff Oren Coleman and deputies are attempting a check of known members of the gang to ascertain if any are missing.

Birger, who lived in Harrisburg, is missing and has not been seen there for several days. Lory Price, a state highway partolman, said that he saw Art Newman, a Birger lieutenant, his wife and Mrs. Birger leaving Harrisburg in an automobile Saturday. They told him, he said, that they would return until after the trial at Springfield, Illinois, the last of this month, of Carl, Earl and Bernard Shelton, who are charged with mail robbery.

Newman and his wife had lived at the roadhouse until Friday.

Coleman is working on a theory that three of the bodies are those of members of the Birger gang and that the fourth is that of one of the attacking gangsters. There are evidences of a struggle 30 feet in front of the road house, with marks indicating that a heavy object had been dragged toward the burned structure.

Ray Rone and Harvey Dungey, said to be members of the Birger gang, who are held in jail on auto theft charges, could not give no assistance in attempts at identification.

The destruction of the road house and camp was reported to Oren Coleman, sheriff of Williamson county at Marion, Illinois, Saturday by an automobilist. Coleman and George Bell, coroner, with a party of deputies discovered the bodies.

Farmers living in the vicinity of the roadhouse reported that they had heard explosions about midnight in the direction of the camp, and shortly afterward saw flames there. None of them dared to investigate for fear they would encounter those who had burned the place.

Shady Nest consisted of a one story log cabin with basement, a powerhouse and a barbecue stand. The cabin was burned to the ground, the powerhouse had been blown up and the barbecue stand riddled with bullets.

The proprietor of a filling station at Crab Orchard, seven miles east of Marion, told Sheriff Coleman that two automobiles passed his filling station before midnight going east in the direction of the roadhouse and that the same automobiles returned an hour later, going in the opposite direction at high speed. He said that he did not note the license number of either automobile, nor did he recognize any of the occupants.

The roadhouse was the object of an airplane bombing attack last fall a few hours after the Sheltons were arrested by federal agents on the mail robbery charge, but the bombs missed fire. Birger blamed the Shelton gang with the attack.

The gang leader repeatedly has said that he will kill Shelton on sight, and recently offered a reward for information as to his whereabouts. Newman has said that Carl Shelton was one of several men who attacked him and his wife with machine guns while driving near Harrisburg early last fall.

Carl Shelton is out on $60,000 bond awaiting trial on the mail robbery charge, but Earl and Bernard are held in jail. One is at Peoria and the other at Bloomington, Illinois, following their entering of not guilty pleas in federal court at Springfield last week. Birger was named as an accessory before the fact in the murder of Mayor Adams, after a corner's jury had heard testimony that the gang leader had made threats against Adams.

The warrant for Birger's arrest was delivered to Sheriff Lige Turner of Saline county, but it is uncertain whether it was served, for Birger has not filed bond and was not taken to the Franklin county seat at Benton for arraignment. Turner refused to tell what he had done with the warrant.

MRS. GILDERSLEEVE DEAD.

Mrs. Rosabelle Gildersleeve, widow of the late Leland H. Gildersleeve, died at the home of her son, William Gildersleeve, 800 Hamlet street, Columbus, early Saturday morning, at the age of 62 years. She had been in failing health two years, as the result of a stroke of paralysis. Mrs. Gildersleeve leaves in addition to her son, William, three other sons, Charles, of Circleville; Fred and Eugene Gildersleeve of Columbus; three daughters Mrs. Harry Calbert of Mt. Sterling and Misses May and Lella Gildersleeve a sister, Mrs. Love Thompson of Portland, Oregon, and nine grandchildren.

The funeral services were conducted at the family residence Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Additional services were held at the Methodist Episcopal church in Hallsville, south of Circleville, Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock Central standard time. Burial was made in the Hallsville cemetery.

No Poisonous Charcoal

Neither willow charcoal nor any other charcoal could contain an active poisonous substance, since charcoal has necessarily been prepared at high temperatures, and all of the volatile and active materials have been driven off. In a chemical way charcoal is an inactive neutral substance.

Movie Stars Have Adopted Whippet Racing

Whippet racing is the latest fad of the screen stars in Los Angeles. Pauline Starke and Matt Moore are shown starting dogs in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer championship race.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Cincinnati — Emil J. Ulrich, 56, shot and killed his wife, Caroline, 36, at their farm home near here and then committed suicide by turning the gun on himself. Mrs. Ulrich's body was found in the kitchen. Her head was partially torn away by a charge of buckshot. His body was in the basement, his head also partly blown off. A stick and a shotgun, lying nearby indicated Ulrich had used the stick to manipulate the trigger of the gun in ending his own life.

Canton — Five prisoners tore up a lavatory in a cell, pried up a plate in a steel door, dropped into the basement and escaped from the county jail Sunday night. Those who escaped were: Charles Pitts, awaiting trial on a charge of carrying concealed weapons; Fred Strauss, Charles Hudson, Michael Thornton and Thomas R. Morton, all awaiting trial on burglary charges.

Ben Rudner, who goes on trail next month charged with the murder of Don R. Mellett had no part in the jail break.

Cleveland — Is assured a season of Metropolitan grand opera annually for the next five years. Concerts have been signed for an entire week of opera starting May 2. A committee has started work to assure success of the undertaking.

Cleveland — Rev. James A. Rutledge, 73, widely known in Methodist Episcopal church circles in northern Ohio will be buried Wednesday from the home of his son in Jewett, Ohio. He died Sunday.

Cleveland — An automobile, struck a family waiting for a street car Sunday night, killing Andrew Poratz and injuring two members of his family.

Findlay — J. C. Donnell, 72, president of the Ohio Oil company and Findlay's leading citizen died of heart trouble at 3:45 o'clock Monday morning at his home on South Main street. Donnell had been ill three and one-half weeks. He had rallied Sunday and it was believed that he was recovering.

Funeral services will be held at the home at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Rev. J. D. Lindsay, pastor of the First Presbyterian church will officiate.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

First Horses in America

The first horses were brought to the West Indies and Mexico by the Spanish explorers. The story of the first horse ever brought to America is not known.

MAD STAMPEDE FOLLOWS BOY'S SCREAM OF FIRE

Eighty Children Suffocated on Panic in Montreal Theater Fire.

Seventy-seven children, averaging 11 years of age were smothered, crushed or trampled to death when they tried to make their escape from the balcony floor of a burning moving picture theater at Montreal, Quebec, January 9.

The owner, Emile E. Lawland, and the assistant manager, ticket taker, and doorman were taken into custody about midnight Sunday night and held pending a coroner's inquest. It was expected that they will be charged with violating a law of the Province of Quebec prohibiting the admission of children under 16 to a theater not accompanied by a parent or guardian.

With the grimest of irony, the film being flashed on the screen at the time an usher shouted "fire" and the panic broke out was "Get 'Em Young."

About a thousand people were in the house at the time, most of them on the lower floor, but the balcony, because of the cheap admission, was filled largely with children. All those on the lower floor and those who used the west stairway down from the balcony escaped uninjured.

It was at a bend five steps from the bottom of the left stairway that the terrified children become hopelessly wedged and died.

The living and dead were wedged so tightly in the turn of the stairway that policemen and firemen were compelled to chop holes into the walls and stairs before they could extricate the human mass.

Priests moved thru the throng administering the last rites of the Catholic church to the dying. Never Catholic church to the dying. Never scenes been witnessed.

Lieutenant Charbonneau, a member of the Salvage squad, described the scene on the narrow stairs as "the worst I have ever encountered."

"When I got there," he said, "the stairway was jammed. We pulled the bodies, living and dead, out the best way we could. I have been fighting fires a long time, but have never encountered anything so horrible.

"Little children stretched their hands out of the struggling mass crying 'Save us, save us.' We got ropes over the shoulders and bodies of those we could reach, but it was not until ten or fifteen men hauled together that we were able to pull them out.

The fire itself, which was believed to have been caused by a short circuiting of a wire, was in itself of no consequence. There would have been no deaths except for the stampede.

About 30 victims were in hospital Monday, mostly children, some of whom were expected to die.

AUTO COLLISION.

A Ford roadster in which four young people were riding collided with another Ford machine in which two people were riding at the Adelphi and Kingston cross roads near Leistville Sunday evening about 7 o'clock.

Miss Marie Arledge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harley Arledge, was the only one injured. She was taken to the home of Ferd Dumm and Dr. Barton was called. Miss Arledge's bruises were only slight. She received an injury to her head. She was taken to the home of her by her attending physician.

Honor Among Thieves

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

THE "Honor Among Thieves club" was formed in the beginning more or less in the spirit of fun. Then, as the young girls of Akhurst, banded together in that secret society, began to mature, the club took on a more serious meaning.

There were all types of girls in the club. They were banded together in inviolable bonds to guard the welfare of one another, especially in affairs of the heart. If one of their members was being besieged by one of the opposite sex it was the duty of members of the H. A. T. to snoop into the man's credentials as a possible husband and in all ways try to insure the future happiness of their affected member.

Always when a love affair cropped up there was a meeting of the H. A. T. and the situation discussed openly from its very inception—the member herself giving full details up to date. After that the girls were regular bloodhounds on the trail of a doomed man—doomed, at least, if there was anything in his past or present that could put him out of the running.

One day Ivy Canfield told the H. A. T. of her engagement to Gregory Wells.

"You'll hardly credit," she told the meeting, "that I have become engaged to a man who hardly knows a golf club from a walking stick and who doesn't dance, tennis or indulge in any sports, but—there you are."

"Must be something wrong—no companionship—no common interests and—but what are his weaknesses? Is he a flirt?"

Ivy laughed her wholesome, frank laugh. "No—I think he is the finest type of man I have ever come across. If you are to nip this affair in the bud you'll have to put your finest hounds on the scent." For a moment Ivy's eyes grew thoughtful. "I do wish sometimes though that—well, either greater soul-stirring depths were in me or less in Gregory."

There was just a moment's silence among the members, then Doris Kenyon's soft voice broke it. "Perhaps loving so splendid a man will stir those deep places—love does wonderful things to us."

"I'm afraid the 'deeps' aren't here—that's the trouble. Now if it were you, Doris, well—it would be a different affair."

The club agreed unanimously that Ivy's man and Doris must meet. Had it not been Doris then another would have been selected. Ivy's future happiness hung in the balance. It was one of the club's most frequent means of discovering instability in mankind—they chose their most likely vamp and set her to work. If the man fell he was not considered a fit mate.

Therefore when Gregory Wells again came to Akhurst to visit Ivy he was presented to many of the Honor Among Thieves club girls, and among them was Doris.

Gregory shook hands with all the girls and his most genial big-hearted smile greeted them all. Then—Doris found her hand in his. The smile suddenly left his eyes, though it lingered on his lips and her fingers grew icy within his grip. Their hands fell apart and they did not speak.

She bucked up a few moments later and was her own laughing self and found that with an apparently effortless effort she could chat with Gregory in a voice that did not vibrate with the emotion his coming had awakened.

"Sing for us, Doris," commanded Ivy laughingly.

Doris sang for them. All the dormant ecstasy of her nature suddenly awakened, flung itself into her voice, and even Ivy held her breath to listen. When she had finished some three or more, she went out on the wide veranda to sit in silence.

Gregory Wells followed her out. Ivy watched him go and a queer little smile played about her lips.

Outside in the clear moonlight, Gregory reached the balustrade on which Doris leaned. She looked straight up at him, the moon shining into the depths of her eyes. Gregory put his hand over hers and his touch swept her being as by a mighty wave.

"Don't," she said swiftly. "I am Ivy's best friend."

"It wouldn't make the slightest difference," Gregory Wells said. "Nothing would make any difference now—it must be—it couldn't be otherwise." His voice shook.

"Please send Ivy out to me," said Doris; "I want her."

"Ivy," said Doris steadily when her friend reached her side, "I am going to throw over the duties of the Honor Among Thieves club. I cannot vamp your Gregory because he's the only man in the world I could ever love" (she was a bit breathless) "and I want you to know I care too much for you to—to," her voice became inaudible.

A helpless laugh escaped Ivy, then she slipped her arm around Doris.

"Dear, don't take it so hard. A marriage between you and Gregory would be of heaven itself, while with me it would only be of the Earth. There aren't so many great big love affairs that we can afford to let one slip by—there, there, dear, please don't cry. I shall be really happy only with some golf champion or baseball fan—and I'll be a far better friend to Gregory than I would ever be a wife." And with her queer little smile she slipped back into the house to send a man out to his mate.

37,000 TONS ADDED TO EARTH YEARLY

French Scientist Says Shooting Stars Not Dangerous.

Paris.—In a recent article in Le Petit Journal, Abbe Th. Moreaux, director of the Observatory of Bruges, discussed the annual fall visitation of shooting stars, particularly noticeable in France. He said:

"Every year readers of Le Petit Journal write to me about the appearance in the sky of luminous meteors which sometimes burst in the air and light up the landscape. When these stones reach the earth they constitute what scientists call aerolites. Their metallic character is now well recognized and there are many varieties of them to be seen in the beautiful collection of the Paris Museum of Natural History."

"Astronomers still discuss their origin, but all admit that the aerolites are the remnants of comets. Between the shooting stars, which weigh hardly a centigram, and the aerolites, which may weigh several tons, there would be perfect identity, if they were of the same weight."

Dangers Are Exaggerated.

"Formerly people attributed to these bodies all sorts of terrors. But today we possess better information about them and are in a position to say that the dangers from a fall of meteors are greatly exaggerated."

"Ought we to fear a general bombardment? I don't think so. The interplanetary spaces are being emptied more and more of the materials which contributed to the formation of the sun and the planets, and there is no reason in nature to foresee a terrifying recurrence of meteors. Undoubtedly certain years, like 1908, 1914 and 1926, show incontestable maxima. But year in and year out our planet receives on an average only 87,000 tons of foreign material."

"That is very little compared with the total mass of the globe—so little that at such a rate it would take 400,000,000 years to accumulate a layer one centimeter thick over the entire surface of the earth."

"At this rate the length of the day would be increased hardly a thousandth of a second in a million years. We have plenty of time to see what will happen, and the aerolites will hardly derange our sidereal clocks."

"Every year we notice, also, a return of warmth with St. Martin's summer, which arrives in November, and some subtle scientists have concluded that this phenomenon of warming up should be attributed to the big swarm of shooting stars, known under the name of Leonides, through which the earth passes at this period."

Heat Theory Is Denied.

"Here is an admirable piece of foolishness which will be passed out again this year if the autumn continues to be normal."

"Let us suppose, however, that at the moment of the November shower there falls on the earth one hundred tons of meteors every day, which is a very high maximum. Do you know what amount of heat that would develop at the end of a year for each square meter of the earth's surface? Exactly what the sun sends us in a tenth of a second. You see that a little figuring often prevents people from saying foolish things."

"But there is another consideration. If our dog days during St. Martin's summer were due to encountering meteor swarms, the phenomenon would occur everywhere on the globe. Now, all experienced meteorologists will tell you that St. Martin's summer is limited to certain countries and is not encountered everywhere on the earth's surface."

"The question is thus pretty well cleared up. Apart from being struck on the head by a meteor, which is an extremely rare occurrence, we can reassure ourselves as to the future which the shooting stars and the aerolites have in store for our planet."

Air-Mail Pilots Earn as High as $9,000 Yearly

Washington.—The lure of flying holds its monetary reward, at least for the air-mail pilot.

The aviator postman receives an annual salary of between $4,000 and $9,000. The high pay, plus the desire for the excitement of flying, recently caused two field superintendents of the service to desert ground jobs and return to piloting. Both now fly regular mail routes.

The mail pilot receives a base pay of between $2,000 and $3,600, depending on length of service, and is paid in addition by the mile for flying service.

For daylight flying, he receives a 5-cent rate between Cleveland and Cheyenne, 6 cents between Cheyenne and Reno, and 7 cents between New York and Cleveland, and between Reno and San Francisco. For night flying the mileage scale is doubled.

The hazards of mail piloting are held by postal officials to justify the pay.

Begging Pays

Philadelphia.—A wheel-chair beggar has been found to have a bank account of $15,000, an automobile and real estate, and to be paying $4 a day at a hotel.

Quit Tickling

Toronto.—Many adults are stammerers because mothers tickle baby's toes to bring that heribic smile, according to Dr. W. J. Blais.
